A thought is an electrochemical event taking place in your nerve cells producing a cascade of physiological changes. The article "How Your Thoughts Program Your Cells" explains it this way: There are thousands upon thousands of receptors on each cell in our body. Each receptor is specific to one peptide, or protein.

While an important partner in the triad of the human mind, the conscious mind serves as a scanner for us. It will perceive an event, trigger a need to react, and then depending on the importance of the event, store it either in the unconscious or the subconscious area of the human mind where it remains available to us.

From where does this "I" arise? Seek for it within; it then vanishes. This is the pursuit of wisdom. When the mind unceasingly investigates its own nature, it transpires that there is no such thing as mind. This is the direct path for all. The mind is merely thoughts. Of all thoughts the thought "I" is the root. - Ramana
