Anybody out there modified an old style Mercruiser/Ride Guide Rack Steering system to accept another type (i.e. cheaper) cable? Rideguide replacement cables with the threaded control end are hard to find and cost more than a whole new system, @ $150. :cry: I hate trashing good hardware and parting with hard earned money unnecessarily.

We found the steering cable split and rusted, and wound up cutting it into a couple of pieces to get it out. I found new Ride Guide cables, but I need to change out the cable on the rack, and it doesn't want to come apart. I need to know how to get the cable off of the rack, and also where to make the measurement for cable length.
